CHECK HE OUT TODAY!

On August 19, our club members once again headed to the Middle St. Vrain to repair another mud bog. This one formed just before the two water hole crossings. Gary brought his skid steer to load up the five small trailers we had to haul the road base up to the mud bog.

After getting coordinated at the Middle St. Vrain parking lot we headed up the 4WD road with Jared (Boulder Ranger District), and Tim and Zach, the forest service sawyers.

The five vehicles hauling the trailers, Gordon, Allen, Oakley, Matt, and Adam, came last after filling them up. By the time the trailer group drove the 1.4 miles to the bog, the geo-cloth had been placed in the hole. Logs had previously been cut to length from the blow down in the area. These were being drug up to the road from the forest to be hauled to the bog to serve as corduroy on top of the geo-cloth.

It took an hour to get organized and get the trailers turned around to dump the road base at the head of the hole. We used old chip board to dump the road base on to make it easier to shovel later. After the trailers left, the log group began hauling the logs and placing them in the bog hole. The bog was over 35 feet long and about 10 feet wide. The sawyers were limbing and cutting logs to length to keep up with the need at the hole. In the afternoon only about half of the first course had been laid in. Three trips with the trailers had been made, making a long pile of road base.

One more run of all the trailers finished out the hauling of road base for the day, which got most of the road base there, leaving some for later projects.

Those that were not spending the night headed out, including the two sawyers from the Forest Service. The gate was locked and those of us that were camping set up just past the two water holes. We had a nice night with a small camp fire to share stories around.

Next morning we broke camp after breakfast. Ray arrived early and we all walked over to the bog to review, and plan the day's work. We needed to finish getting the rest of the first course of logs in so that we could start the second course which would allow some to start laying in the road base. We rounded up Greg's jeep to winch in the logs, and Gordon's jeep to fetch the logs from the woods. The Forest Service sawyers arrived and began cutting custom lengths for us.

Shortly, we were ready to begin shoveling road base over our corduroy. Finally the road began to look fixed, at least at one end. Matt headed to the entrance to bring back the two wheel barrows the Forest Service sawyers had brought, as well as letting in a few more members to help out. We quickly got into a rhythm and had three to four logs being hauled in by Gordon to be placed in the hole.

The shoveling crew would catch up to the end of the logs and get a break as we waited for more logs. Allen and Oakley took a few trips to the west along the road and collected rocks to augment the logs by filling in some smaller gaps. We also placed a few rocks along the ends of the logs to strengthen the sides of the repair.

We took a lunch break at noon and then started back up again. As the repair reached the half way point of the 35 foot long bog we were sure we would finish Sunday. The road base we had hauled the day before was going to be enough so another run with the trailers would not be needed.

As a last touch a hazard tree was dropped by the sawyers and Gordon dragged the entire thing down to the edge of the repair to keep traffic off of the bypass that had formed.

Loading up the tools we headed to the entrance to do a little more work. Having five large boulders that we brought in with the road base to use at the obstacle, Greg guided Gary on where to place them to maintain the difficulty of the entrance obstacle. This was done after getting the trailers and the Forest Service Rubicon out.

This makes our fifth bog repair on the Middle St. Vrain. Thanks to everyone that helped out to get this done.

Northern District Land Use Update by Adam Mehlberg

Canyon Lakes Ranger District:

Letter From the President - Ige Gustavson

Here's hoping you had a great summer four wheeling. After an epic 54 days of wheeling last year, I barely got out this year, staying home with intentions of finishing up projects that to this day remain untouched. It seems life keeps getting in the way of fun and projects. I had four weekends ruined by inventories at work, multiple weekends where I fought issues with Puff, my evil first gen 4Runner, and the worst part is I lost my mother. We were lucky that we all had time to visit with her before she passed away, but it's a reminder that you could go at any time, so get out now and enjoy yourself. I plan on trying to bust out some stuff over the winter months. Snow wheeling is something I've done for years, but I'm growing out of it, so maybe I can finally get my little pickup up and running.

I also plan on spending less money on parts that I buy for projects, then never even install before selling the project off or changing direction. I kick myself for the money I put into things that could've gone towards what I love...four wheeling and keeping the land open for my enjoyment. The Bears Ears controversy should be a reminder that our lands are on the chopping block every day. Nothing but themselves is sacred to the politicians and eco-terrorists. It sucks and no one wants to deal with the politics of it, but we will lose our trails if we don't fight for the ones we have and, better yet, try to gain more trails. That is possible...Grand Mesa Jeep Club has proven that working with local agencies can pay off by getting multiple trails opened up.

I had a chance to get to Wyoming with a friend to explore some of the Mormon Trail but we kept hitting locked gates and having to backtrack out. That renewed a passion in my friend who now wants to find a way to traverse Wyoming on as much of the Pioneer/California/Oregon/Mormon trails as possible. With new map technology being presented by companies like Gaia, you can find which areas are public vs private and determining which land agency is in control of a section of land is getting easier. We found most of the areas that were closed were where the trail cut through private land, but that there was BLM land around those areas so we are going to try to figure out a route and present it to the state and the regional BLM office.

Gps technology shouldn't make reading maps a part of our past. You may end up in an area with no service to download the maps you need and that's where paper and compass come in handy. I, myself, am horrible with paper maps. I can stumble through if necessary, but need to brush up. For that matter, I'm horrible with gps also, but learning more about that is for a later date. I plan on educating myself more about map reading this winter so I can help my buddy figure out that route across Wyoming. If I'm lucky and the stars align and with a little bit of hard work and possibly dollars, maybe we can get the route opened up and I can get out and enjoy it in a rig that hasn't run in decades before I start pushing up daisies.
